MEMORANDUM FOR PRESIDENT AND BOARD MEMBERS

SUBJECT: Memorandum of Instruction (MOI) for Fiscal Year 2023 (FY23), Lieutenant Colonel (LTC), Army Nurse Corps (AN), Medical Service Corps (MS), Army Medical Specialist Corps (SP), and Veterinary Corps (VC) Promotion Selection Boards (PSB)

1. Authority. This selection board is convened pursuant to 10 U.S.C. § 611(a) to consider officers in the Army Nurse Corps (AN), Medical Service Corps (MS), Army Medical Specialist Corps (SP), and Veterinary Corps (VC) for promotion to the grade of lieutenant colonel.

2. Introduction. You have been selected to serve on this board because the Army has confidence in your ability to recommend those officers who are best qualified to make the greatest contributions as Army leaders in the years ahead. The objective of the selection process is to meet the leadership and management needs of the Army and the Department of Defense by promoting those officers who have best demonstrated leadership, effectiveness and potential for service at higher levels. Your collective responsibilities as board members are, therefore, vital to the future of the Army.

a. Bear in mind the serious nature of board duty and your obligation to ensure these proceedings remain above reproach. The oath you have taken requires you to ensure that all eligible officers are considered without prejudice or partiality. You will adhere to that oath and to all governing laws, directives, regulations, written administrative instructions regarding board procedures, and these instructions in selecting officers who meet the needs of the Army as outlined herein. Your failure to do so may be cause to remove you from this board.

b. Additional information. The Officer Personnel Management System (OPMS) has developed a strong bench of talented officers. Your job is to select the best officers to lead the Army into the future. However, certain requirements must be met to ensure a sufficient pool of officers are available for key operational, institutional, and other assignments. Administrative information and eligibility criteria of the officers under consideration are in Annex A. Additional guidance and assignment considerations are in Annex B. Requirements are in Annex C.

3. Guidance. There are many qualities required from our leaders. All must possess the character, competence, commitment and other critical personal behaviors necessary to serve at the highest levels. All must also have a deep and diverse base of professional experience. Fighting our Nation's wars is the Army's mission and, because it is difficult to predict the challenges the Army and the Nation will face in the future, our culture must embrace and reward leaders who are smart, intellectually agile, innovative, intelligent risk-takers, and strategic critical thinkers. We need leaders capable of leading change, leading our forces in combat, leading joint, interagency, multinational organizations when appropriate to their grades, who have excellent executive management skills, are well-grounded in business practices, and who are capable of leading effectively at every level. As such, while the purpose of this board is to select lieutenant colonels, you should only recommend officers of character with potential to serve at higher levels.

a. Threshold Personal Behaviors. In selecting the Army's future leaders, you must ensure that all of the officers you recommend meet the following core criteria. Look hard for examples and indications from an officer's career where the officer demonstrated – or failed to demonstrate – the behaviors described below:

(1) Integrity. Officers must be leaders who epitomize the Army's Values. They must be beyond reproach morally and ethically; honest in their words and deeds; and take responsibility for all that they say and do.

(2) Courage. Officers must be leaders who say and do the right thing, regardless of the consequences. They must show courage under fire. They must be willing to act in the face of criticism, when they are taking a minority position, or when a relationship may be at risk, in order to accomplish the greater good.

(3) Empathy. Officers must be leaders who can understand and appreciate the feelings, thoughts, or attitudes of others. They must also be inclusive, exercising their empathy to fully understand problems and then develop solutions that serve the greatest good.

(4) Collaborative. Officers must be team players who work well with others, regardless of whether they share their views or experiences. They must be able to work with broad and diverse groups of stakeholders to reach the best solution.

(5) Respectfulness. Officers must be fully committed to treating everyone with dignity and respect. They must not tolerate harassment, bullying, or toxic leadership in any form, and must take proactive measures to eliminate it.

(6) Articulate. Officers must be able to write and speak well. They must have strong, positive interpersonal skills, and be able to publicly convey a message to large and diverse audiences who may, or may not, have familiarity with the Army.

(7) Physical fitness. Officers must be physically and mentally ready for the challenges they face. They must have the perspective, discipline, and resilience to sustain their physical fitness and well-being, emotional health, and cognitive abilities under prolonged stress.

b. Objective Personal Behaviors. In selecting Army leaders, you should select officers who, based on performance and potential, best possess the following behaviors:

(1) Display Intellect. Officers must be smart, curious, and creative. They must also be critical thinkers who display sound judgment, are open-minded, and who are innovators.

(2) Drive Results. Officers must be able to deliver clear results. Given the Army's mission, we need officers who can prepare our Army for war, prevent conflicts when possible and, if necessary, prevail in combat. We are seeking officers who have proven they can perform these tasks, deliver these results, and demonstrate the potential to do so at higher levels. Give strong consideration to officers with recognized heroism or valor in combat.

(3) Think Strategically. Officers must demonstrate strategic warfighting potential. They must be smart, confident, and agile leaders who excel in ambiguous or complex environments. They must possess a good understanding of the future, a clear vision of where they want to take their organization, and be capable of effectively communicating their ideas with the energy, resolve, and creativity to see them through. They must also understand and have considered the impact of their ideas and decisions on their organization, the Army, and the Nation.

(4) Lead Change. Officers must be able to recognize the need for change when it occurs, and then lead in a positive direction. To do this they must be willing to challenge the conventional wisdom, ask hard questions, and encourage others to do the same. They must also be good listeners who collaborate with others, looking outside their organizations for good ideas. Officers who have clearly demonstrated the courage, ability, foresight to call for, and lead change should be given special consideration.

(5) Develop Others. Officers must be leaders who create a positive environment in their organizations, build cohesion and trust, encourage initiative and candor, and genuinely care for people. The officers you recommend should be builders of future leaders who value both the conventional and unconventional experiences. They should be able to identify younger officers who show great potential, work to develop, coach, and mentor them, and help guide their career for the greater good of the Army.

4. Army Medical Department (AMEDD) Considerations. Pursuant to Section 615, Title 10 United States Code, the board will give consideration to an officer's clinical proficiency and skill as a health professional to at least as great an extent as the board gives to the officer's administrative and management skills.

5. Training and Education. Earning an advanced degree, conducting research, professional writing and publication of works about our profession, training with private industry, or achieving other notable success in a unique learning environment enhances the skills the Army needs and demonstrates commitment to life-long learning. Give due consideration to officers who pursue advanced degrees beyond the ones affiliated with our Professional Military Education institutions, particularly those with additional masters or a doctoral degree in fields relevant to the profession of arms. We must also have officers who can provide leadership in key areas that involve special administrative, managerial, and technical skills that require time to build. Many qualified officers, because of their unique and special skills, have successfully completed extensive periods of Army-directed training or education and have made important contributions to ensure our force is properly organized, trained, and equipped. You must carefully consider these officers' potential to serve in key officer billets to meet the critical needs of the Army and Department of Defense.

6. Diversity and Equal Opportunity. The strength of our Army comes from developing well trained, equipped, and diverse forces. Developing and maintaining qualified and demographically diverse leadership is critical for mission effectiveness and is essential to national security. Effective leaders understand that organizational success depends on the ability of people of different backgrounds to work together, while bringing the value of their diverse experiences to the mission. With a culture that embraces diversity, the Army is better able to attract and keep the best men and women from across the Nation, and to operate more successfully around the world. Moreover, the success of today's Army comes from a total commitment to the ideals of freedom, fairness, and human dignity upon which our country was founded. It is vital that our Army is in fact one of equal opportunity - equal opportunity for all Soldiers is the only acceptable standard for our Army. This principle applies to every aspect of career development and utilization in our Army, but is especially important to demonstrate in the selection process. Select meritorious officers who create and maintain an inclusive environment where individual attributes are recognized, accepted, and, most importantly, valued, regardless of race, color, national origin, religion, sex (including gender identity), sexual orientation. In doing so, our Soldiers will have a clear perception of equal opportunity in the selection process.

7. Conclusion. Thank you for your service as a member of this board. Few other duties are as important as selecting the Army's future senior leaders. The decisions you make will have a lasting effect on the Army, the Department of Defense, and the Nation. Our Soldiers, Army Civilians, and their Families deserve officer leaders who possess the character, competence, intellect, commitment and other personal behaviors to lead them well, take care of them, and treat them with dignity, fairness, and respect at all times. Selecting officers with traits described above is critical if we are to remain ready to deploy, fight and win our Nation's wars, and accomplish any other task assigned to our Army. I have great confidence in your ability to carry out this important responsibility.
